

If elected, a union would negotiate your contract.

But who would be at the bargaining table?

If you elect NWMU and the American Federation of Teachers to represent you on all terms and conditions of employment, they'll send a group to negotiate on your behalf. That group would likely negotiate with a labor lawyer from Providence Swedish, someone from HR, and Dr. Ethan Babcock.

Which begs the question:

Why pay dues to a union when you already have direct access to the people who would be at the bargaining table?
